In the face of this imminent destruction, Earth Defense Forces (EDF) are formed. Comprised of the world's finest soldiers, scientists, and strategists, EDF stands as the last hope for humanity's survival. Led by General Samuel Parker, a battle-hardened military genius with unwavering resolve, they vow to give everything to protect our species.

With unity and conviction, the EDF becomes a beacon of hope for the desperate survivors. They develop and deploy advanced weaponry, constructed with recovered alien technology. Tanks equipped with energy cannons, jetpack-wearing soldiers, and mechs incorporating deadly lasers illustrate that humanity refuses to go down without a fight.

As the war reaches a tipping point, the EDF discovers a weakness in the Devastators' technology. Slowly but surely, they seize control of their own destiny. Yet, victory remains uncertain. The Devastator's relentless pursuit of Earth's extinction challenges the EDF's every move. Our desperate struggle transcends

I retired from the USMC, and now I write about space marines.

I never thought I'd actually become one.

As a sci-fi author with a hit TV show, I have a few ideas about what alien invaders are supposed to look like. In my stories, they're technologically advanced monsters, with tentacles, and no faces.

Turns out I was right about the technology.

And about how angry they'd be.

But the way they look...that's more terrifying than even I could have imagined.

They look exactly like us.

Because they are us.

Dragon Award Finalist Rick Partlow's Earth at War series is military sci-fi at its finest: packed with nonstop action and seasoned with grade-A military humor. Jump into the story today!
