As we ride out of the city, we are immediately embraced by the stunning natural beauty that Peru has to offer. From the picturesque beaches of the Pacific coast to the rugged mountains of the Andes, every turn reveals a new scenic wonder.

Exploring the Andean Highlands

Leaving the coast behind, we venture into the heart of the Andean highlands. The sight of snow-capped peaks, crystal-clear lakes, and lush green valleys is truly awe-inspiring. We navigate steep trails, cross roaring rivers, and camp under a sky filled with countless stars.

During our time in the Andean highlands, we have the privilege of visiting remote villages and interacting with local communities. We learn about their ancient traditions, sample traditional cuisine, and witness traditional dances that have been passed down through generations.

Into the Wild: The Bolivian Salt Flats

As we cross into Bolivia, a surreal and otherworldly landscape awaits us – the Salar de Uyuni, the largest salt flat in the world. Stretching as far as the eye can see, this natural wonder offers a unique riding experience like no other.

Amidst the vast expanse of white salt, we witness stunning reflections of the sky, creating illusions that blur the boundaries between earth and heaven. The click-clack of hooves against the hardened salt surface serves as the soundtrack to our adventure.

From the Altiplano to the Pampas

Leaving the salt flats behind, we continue our journey towards Argentina. Riding through the high-altitude plains of the Altiplano, we encounter herds of grazing llamas and vicuñas.

As we descend from the mountains, the landscape undergoes a dramatic transformation. Rolling green hills and vast grasslands, known as the Pampas, come into view. This region is famous for its gauchos, skilled horsemen who have become symbols of Argentine culture.

The Final Stretch: Buenos Aires, Argentina

After weeks on horseback, we finally reach our destination – the vibrant capital city of Buenos Aires. The city's European-influenced architecture, bustling streets, and passionate tango beats beckon us to explore every corner.

As we dismount and bid farewell to our trusty steeds, we reflect on the incredible journey we've just completed. From the challenging terrains to the captivating cultures, this adventure has left an indelible mark on our souls.

284 hours in the saddle, traversing breathtaking landscapes and immersing oneself in diverse cultures – the journey from Lima to Buenos Aires on horseback
