Eyewitnesses reported seeing strange lights illuminating the sky, moving in a synchronized pattern as if guided by an otherworldly force. The eerie sight left many perplexed and questioning the existence of extraterrestrial visitors.

Local authorities were flooded with calls from concerned citizens, with reports ranging from glowing orbs to elongated objects descending from the heavens. Something extraordinary was happening, and it wasn't confined to Roswell alone.

An Unsettling Journey Through Albuquerque

July 2003 also brought forth an array of strange occurrences in New Mexico's largest city, Albuquerque. Nestled between the Rio Grande and the Sandia Mountains, this vibrant desert metropolis witnessed an influx of peculiar sightings throughout that fateful month.

Witnesses described encounters with unidentified flying objects (UFOs) hovering above the Sandia Mountains, silently traversing the nighttime skyline. The eerie silence added to the mystique, captivating the imaginations of those who bore witness to these unexplained phenomena.

Unveiling the Secrets of Santa Fe

Santa Fe, the capital city of New Mexico, is renowned for its Pueblo-style architecture, art scene, and spiritual energy. However, in July 2003, a different kind of energy seemed to be permeating the city as mysterious happenings unfolded.

Residents spoke of strange occurrences in the night sky, eerily similar to those witnessed in Roswell and Albuquerque. Glowing objects danced among the stars, defying the laws of physics and leaving viewers awe-struck.

The presence of extraterrestrial life became a topic of fervent discussion. Late-night gatherings were fueled by debates and personal accounts, with skeptics and believers vying for the truth behind these unexplained occurrences.

Taos - Where Reality Meets the Unknown

Known for its unique blend of Native American, Spanish, and Anglo cultures, Taos has always been a magnet for those seeking adventure and spiritual enlightenment. In July 2003, it attracted a different kind of seeker.

Amidst the awe-inspiring landscapes of Taos, visitors and locals reported sightings of unidentified aerial crafts. Witnesses claim to have seen metallic objects defying gravity, dashing across the sky at unimaginable speeds.

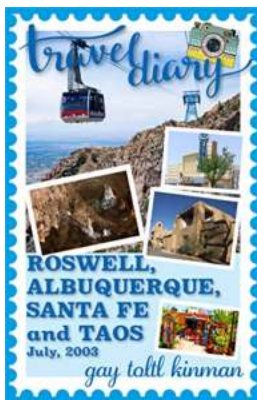

These sightings sparked an intense curiosity, with many flocking to Taos in search of answers. Speculation ran wild, theories were formed, and the mystery deepened.

A Chapter Forever Etched in Time

More than a decade has passed since the events of that enigmatic July month in 2003. Many eyewitnesses have since moved on, their lives returning to the ordinary. However, for those who experienced these strange phenomena, the memories remain vivid, forever etching the summer of 2003 into the annals of New Mexico's history.

Was it a mere coincidence, a collective figment of imagination, or did these sightings point to something greater? The truth may forever elude us, trapped within the vastness of the universe. However, the events of Roswell, Albuquerque, Santa Fe, and Taos in July 2003 ignited a spark of curiosity that continues to burn bright in the hearts of those who yearn to explore the mysteries of the unknown.

Some of the highlights were the Santa Fe Opera for La Belle Helene; the Georgia O’Keeffe Museum; then picking up granddaughter, A, 15, to attend an Intergenerational Elderhostel program in Roswell; meeting of one the original Rocket Boys; and seeing the kids firing their homemade rockets with the local Rocket club.

Out of this trip came the story Majestic-12. Set in October, 1973, a professor may have found proof that Extra Terrestrials really did exist—but someone else wants to keep that proof buried.
