St Paul's biography is usually based on The Acts of the Apostles in the Bible, an inspiring narrative with few historical facts. This book is based on the authentic writings of the Saint plus the author's imagination. This process reveals new truths, such as St. Paul was married just like Jesus; he spent crucial years of his life in Nabataea; and he enjoyed a profound friendship with Gnaeus Domitius Corbulo, whose statue you can see in Voorburg in the Netherlands.

Paul emerges as a passionate, earthy and visionary man who could combine the highest forms of thought with the practicalities of his trade as tent-maker. The book may offend fundamentalists but should delight those who are interested in historical fiction, theology or the life of a man who changed the world.
