Discovering Death Valley's Mysteries

Death Valley National Park, located in California, is a place of extremes. It is known as the hottest and driest place in North America, with temperatures reaching up to 134 degrees Fahrenheit (56.7 degrees Celsius) and an average annual rainfall of only 2.36 inches. Despite these harsh conditions, the park's diverse ecosystems are teeming with life and offer a multitude of awe-inspiring sights.

Our adventure begins at the park's entrance, where our expert guides will introduce you to the fascinating history and geology of the area. As we venture deeper into the park, you'll witness the striking contrasts in the landscape, from vast salt flats to towering sand dunes and rugged canyons. Every turn offers a new spectacle, with vibrant colors and surreal formations that will leave you in awe.

Highlights of the Journey

One of the most iconic features of Death Valley is Badwater Basin, the lowest point in North America. Here, you'll have the opportunity to walk on salt flats that stretch as far as the eye can see. As you gaze across the vast expanse, it's hard not to be humbled by the sheer magnitude of nature's power.

For those seeking a challenge, our expert guides will take you on a trek through the mesmerizing Mesquite Flat Sand Dunes. These towering dunes, sculpted by wind and time, offer a surreal landscape that seems straight out of a movie. As you embark on this journey, you'll feel like a true explorer, venturing into an unknown world.

Another must-see attraction is Dante's View, a viewpoint located at an elevation of 5,475 feet (1,669 meters) that offers breathtaking panoramas of the park. From here, you can witness the dramatic contrast between the colorful badlands and the snow-capped peaks of the Panamint Range.

Wildlife Encounters

Death Valley is not only a land of geological wonders but also a sanctuary for a variety of unique wildlife. Keep your eyes peeled for desert bighorn sheep, coyotes, kangaroo rats, and if you're lucky, you might even spot a kit fox or a bobcat. Our knowledgeable guides will help you spot these elusive creatures and provide fascinating insights into their behaviors and adaptations to this extreme environment.

Night Skies and Starry Adventures

As the sun sets and darkness falls upon Death Valley, the true magic of the park reveals itself. With minimal light pollution, the night sky here is a stargazer's paradise. Imagine sitting under a blanket of stars, marveling at the Milky Way stretching across the horizon. Our nighttime adventures will take you on a journey through the cosmos, where you'll learn about the constellations and witness the awe-inspiring beauty of the universe.

Preparing for Your Ameritrekking Adventure

Now that you're ready to embark on this extraordinary journey, it's essential to come prepared. Make sure to pack plenty of water, sunscreen, and comfortable clothing suitable for hiking in the desert. Our adventure guides will provide you with more detailed information on what to bring and what to expect during your time in Death Valley National Park.

This is a sample of a full-length book. It is Chapter 15 in "Ameritrekking and Highpointing: Finding the Lost River Range." If you already have that book, don't buy this booklet.

This is the author's account of his visit to Death Valley National Park, which is almost entirely in California. There are several color pictures.

The visit took place in the same year (1997) as the third Ameritrek, the subject of the main book. You are invited to travel vicariously to a famous park and sample the writing at the same time.

The main book resulted from an 8,000-mile, three-week road trip on which the author visited highpoints as well as local and national parks in 20 states.

Over the years he drove more than 100,000 miles and spent over a year on the road. He went to 45 highpoints and many other memorable places. He continues to travel and write. Buy this sample booklet and join the adventure today!
