From Aardvark to Zebra, this book of fun verse gives great entertainment, not only because of the nature of the poems, which are all about animals in the wild, but also because it is educational. Relating to the animals' habitats, breeding habits, eating habits and idiosyncrasies, every poem gives a rather whacky overview. Each animal type has "pet" name to make it friendlier for the 5-"105's" reader and to give the creature a persona with which both children and adults can identify.

The poems are vibrantly illustrated for added impetus. A glossary at the end of the book provides information regarding the zoological names of the animals and explains more factually and fully, their various statistics. It also provides some extra, but not necessarily general, information.

Where research had not produced named animals starting with, for example, the letters "U" and "X", nonsense poems have been composed to keep up the thread of A thru' Z.
