Ava is the new kid at school. Now, she's learning what it means to live in a state with four seasons, far away from everything she's ever known. She's also adjusting to living with her stepdad, who feels like a complete stranger. Plus, she hasn't heard from her real dad ever since her parents' divorce was finalized, and she wonders if he'll ever try to contact her or see her again.

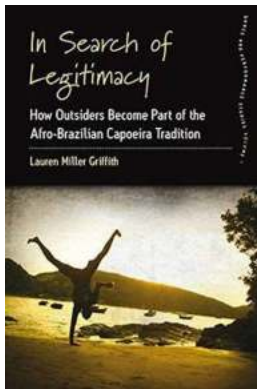

When Ava met Nia, she knew they would become great friends, but now there seems to be some unexplained tension between them. Could it have to do with the crazy scholarship challenge Nia got Ava involved in? Even though the $25,000 can only pay for a fraction of fashion school, it will still help Ava come closer to becoming a successful designer.

Is she old school enough, or will problems in her new friend group keep Ava from moving on to the final round of the Old School Challenge? And can she overcome her feelings for a certain friend that Nia also has a crush on? Uncover whether Ava can make it through her homesickness in the second book of The Old School Series, today.
