Three more steamy unforgettable love stories. Contains: Undercover Billionaire, Trapped with the Billionaire, and Saving Debbie.

Undercover Billionaire:

The undercover assignment sounded simple, until I learned who I'd be protecting.

Kelly:

The note froze my blood. It threatened to make me the next to die if I didn't cooperate. When I asked for protection, I had no idea the FBI would send a Cartwright, one of my family's mortal enemies, to be my bodyguard.

The Cartwrights have been at war with us forever. The plan is he'll pretend to be my boyfriend. No, that won't be awkward at all. My family would kill me if they found out.

It turns out the man I'm sharing my house with isn't the monster I expected. I shouldn't be falling for Adam, yet the more time I spend with him, the stronger his pull becomes.

How can I possibly choose between Adam and my family?

Adam:

With a ton of zeros on my bank balance, I joined the Bureau to make a difference, not a living.

When we learn of the latest threat from, SMK, the Smithsonian Museum Killer, catching him becomes a top priority in the office. I get assigned as undercover protection. The surprise comes when I learn her name: Kelly Benson.

The Hatfields and the McCoys were on better terms than our two families. Years ago, her brother ruined my future, and now I'm tasked to keep his little sister safe. Life isn't fair.

Uncomfortable revelations from our pasts soon complicate everything. Before long, I only know one thing for sure. I don't want this assignment to end.

Forced into close quarters and constant contact, mutual attraction soon ignites. The two must reexamine what they've believed for years about each other. When old truths are questioned, family dynamics become as volatile as the killer stalking Kelly.

Trapped with the Billionaire:His eyes drew me in. I wanted to hold back. One touch of his lips and he won.

I noticed him while basking on the beach in Barbados. I met him on the plane back home. It seemed like fate. Reality slapped me in the face when I got into the office Monday. Our company had been bought, and now I worked for Josh: the man who wanted to dismantle all that my family had built. I wasn't letting him destroy three generations of work without a fight.

I'd seen her at a distance on vacation, met her on the plane back, and now she was seated across from me at the company we'd just purchased. Temptingly beautiful from a distance, had become intriguingly intelligent on first meeting, and now irritatingly feisty. I had an assignment to complete, and she was in the way. The contract said I couldn't fire her, at least not yet.

Competing visions for the company and mutual attraction collide in a volatile mix when Josh and Nicole are forced to work together. The discovery of a body on her property, and an old family secret, soon threaten more than the future of the business.

Saving Debbie:What do you do when your past turns out to be a lie?

Debbie:

My family forced me to participate in their crimes. I'm now on the run from them, and the cops. Luke came to my rescue when I was beaten and robbed of the money I'd saved for my escape. Slowly, I realize that everything I thought I knew is a lie, and the tattooed ex-con is the only one I can trust. To unravel it all, I must talk to the boy from long ago who lived through the nightmare with me.

Luke:

I brought home the battered and bruised girl because the strong protect the weak. She came with a hitch: the news said she'd just robbed a bank. The smart move would have been to claim the reward. I was on parole for another two years, and the impulse to keep her was both stupid and dangerous.

As Debbie's life unravels, she yearns to learn the truth from long ago. But, at what cost?
