Mihir Bose delves deep into the era of Indian silent films, highlighting the pioneering efforts of actors and directors who laid the foundation for what was to come. With their limited resources, they managed to captivate audiences with their storytelling abilities and exquisite cinematography.

Golden Age of Bollywood

In the 1950s and 1960s, Bollywood experienced a golden age characterized by the release of some of its most iconic films. Mihir Bose takes us on a nostalgic ride through this era, shedding light on the contributions of legendary actors like Raj Kapoor, Dev Anand, and Dilip Kumar, whose charisma and talent made them megastars.

The music of Bollywood, under the guidance of music directors like Naushad Ali and S.D. Burman, became an integral part of the industry's identity. Beautiful melodies and soulful lyrics still resonate with audiences today.

The Evolution of Bollywood

The 1970s and 1980s witnessed a shift in Bollywood as it embraced a new wave of cinema. Mihir Bose unravels the emergence of parallel cinema and the rise of renowned directors like Satyajit Ray and Shyam Benegal, who brought a fresh perspective to storytelling.

With the dawn of the 1990s, Bollywood entered a phase of commercialization, marked by the emergence of larger-than-life blockbusters and the of iconic actors like Shah Rukh Khan and Aamir Khan. The rise of the masala film genre and the influence of global cinema shaped Bollywood's trajectory moving forward.

Bollywood Today

In the 21st century, Bollywood has become a global phenomenon, reaching audiences far beyond India's borders. Mihir Bose enlightens us about the industry's globalization, exploring how Bollywood movies have found immense popularity in countries with diverse cultures and backgrounds.

With its numerous accolades, Bollywood has gained recognition on the international stage, with Indian actors such as Priyanka Chopra and Irrfan Khan making their mark in Hollywood. Moreover, efforts to diversify the industry have led to the emergence of meaningful storytelling and the recognition of talents from various backgrounds.

Hollywood may define our idea of movies, but it is the city of Bombay on the west coast of India that is now the centre of world cinema. Every year, the Indian film industry produces more than 1,000 feature films; every day, 14 million Indians go to a movie in the country; a billion more people a year buy tickets for Indian movies than for Hollywood ones. The rise of Bombay as the film capital of the world has been both remarkable and amazing. Bollywood movies themselves are a self-contained world with their multiple song and dance routines, intense melodrama, and plots that contain everything from farce to tragedy, but always produce a happy ending. The men and women who created these movies are even more remarkable; and it is this fantastic, rich, diverse story, a veritable Indian fairyland, that Mihir Bose, a native of Bombay, tells with vivid brilliance in the first comprehensive history of this major social and cultural phenomenon.
