A broken life. A glitch in time. The biggest con of all.

Allie escapes the Nazis in 2153 and makes it back to 2018. But it's not the 2018 she left.

In this timeline, Allie was never born, and Sink controls the wormhole, along with the fate of all Jennys who pass through it. Sink locks up Allie and Bel, then disappears with a wounded Flyx and an unconscious Sharrow.

Allie and Bel hatch a plan to set things right by returning to 1906 to reset the timeline. But first they must escape, rescue Flyx and Sharrow, and wrestle control of the wormhole away from Sink—a Sink who himself is different than before... less crazy. More deadly.

And that's only the beginning.

To get her life back and save her family, Allie must do the unthinkable. And it could mean she ends up with no life at all.

Quake took Allie on a harrowing journey from 2018 to 1906 to 2153 San Francisco. Shake saw Allie in a twisted future that could only be repaired by going back to the beginning—the 1906 Great San Francisco earthquake. Allie's time-travel adventures conclude in Break where she takes the broken past, present, and future, and tries to braid them together in a brand new version of the timeline....
