Ever thought about moving to a Caribbean island? My advice is don't think about it, just do it. And make the Cayman Islands your first choice. To those unfamiliar with us, you will read just why an international couple (and their friends) chose to retire here after having lived in 15 countries or more. It's not just the swaying palms, azure seas, and coconuts. It's the people. The smiles. The good humor. The fun. The first-world lifestyle nestled in a third-world environment.

If you are a Caymanian, read what outsiders (who took the plunge and joined you) feel about your country. It's often much better than how you see yourselves. And that's pretty positive already! It all boils down to that intangible something Caymanians call "CaymanKind." They like each other. They enjoy each other. And they've collectively built the most successful economy in the Caribbean.
