Just like its buildings of different shape and color juxtaposed together in between the lines and squares which make up the set up of the city, Amsterdam itself is a city with many faces, unique experiences set right beside each other in relative peace. It is a city made up the lives of families and students alongside the countercultures of artists/art-lovers, as well as the sex and drug industries so popularly--and unfairly--thought of as the main attraction to the city. It is a city of environmental friendliness and health-consciousness, as most citizens ride bikes which can be strewn throughout the city. While the buildings may not be as intricate as ones found with sculptural figures carved into them Rome, or as abstract as in the sometimes strange public art on display in Barcelona, the sometimes funky, sometimes charmingly simple, buildings give a unique character to the different parts of the city one may wander in.

This collection of photos is meant to entice the viewer to become a visitor, an explorer, and an investigator into this amazing city! Hope you enjoy the book, and your future travels :)
