Keukenhof, 35-km to the south-west of Amsterdam, is probably the most spectacular spring garden in the world. Some seven million tulip, hyacinth, daffodil, lily and more bulbs are planted every year that blossom into lavish, artfully designed flower beds on an area covering 32 hectares (79 acres). The gardens, first opened to the public in 1949, have become so famous today they are easily the main springtime attraction in the Netherlands. This book of 100 exclusive photographs taken in 2016 will enable the reader to take a virtual tour of these truly magnificent gardens.
