One of Dr. Phil's strategies for success entails "creating a perception of uniqueness". Creating a perception of uniqueness can be paramount for achieving unprecedented success in the real world. If you are perceived as unique, one of a kind, and irreplaceable individual then you will be able to offer unprecedented value to your target market since they would not be able to find similar content to the content that you produce if you are featured in all of your video content. In other words, having a perception of uniqueness allows you to foster a unique personalized brand image in the minds of your target market. By establishing a perception of uniqueness among your target market, this culminates in your video content becoming all the more desirable to your target market since it offers something irreplicable which competitor videos are devoid of featuring. By featuring yourself in all of your videos for instance, you are not only creating unique, novel video content, but are also establishing a perception of uniqueness in the minds of your target market. If someone wants to watch a video featuring you then they will only be able to do so by watching your video content on your channel. Having a distinguishable perception of uniqueness allows you to command premium prices for your service offerings. As a one of a kind, unique content creator, people will be all the more inclined to procure your service offerings if they relish watching your content and do not perceive you to be similar to other content creators. Celebrities on Cameo for instance are able to charge thousands of dollars to accommodate short video requests since they have established a perception of uniqueness in the minds of their target market and are perceived as one of a kind, unique individuals. If you want a particular celebrity to accommodate a short video request on Cameo then you should be poised to pay an exorbitant premium price for the celebrity to be able to bring your video request to fruition. You should ultimately do everything in your purview to establish a unique personalized brand image in the minds of your target market so that you can distinguish your brand from the other brands. By establishing a distinguishable perception of uniqueness in the minds of your target market as a one of a kind individual, you can unequivocally command a premium price for your service offerings and stand out among others. Some celebrities are even able to charge over $200,000 as their speaking fee to deliver a speech.
