One of the most iconic attractions in Orkney is the Ring of Brodgar, a Neolithic stone circle that dates back to 2500 BC. Standing majestically amidst the windswept landscape, these ancient standing stones are a testament to the advanced engineering skills and spiritual beliefs of the prehistoric inhabitants.

The Skara Brae, a prehistoric village that was buried under sand dunes for thousands of years, is another must-visit site. Step into the preserved dwellings and immerse yourself in the daily life of the people who lived here 5,000 years ago.

Uncover the Hidden Gems of Shetland

As we continue our journey, we arrive in the captivating archipelago of Shetland. With its rugged cliffs, pristine beaches, and diverse wildlife, Shetland is a paradise for nature enthusiasts.

One of the hidden gems of Shetland is St. Ninian's Isle, a small island connected to the mainland by a tombolo. Explore the stunning white sand beach that surrounds the isle and discover the fascinating ruins of a medieval church.

If you're a bird lover, a visit to Sumburgh Head is a must. This dramatic headland is home to a variety of seabirds such as puffins, guillemots, and razorbills. Stand at the cliff's edge and witness these charming creatures in their natural habitat.

Immerse Yourself in the Majestic Beauty of the North Western Highlands

Our final leg of the journey takes us to the breathtaking landscapes of the North Western Highlands. Prepare to be enthralled by towering mountains, shimmering lochs, and cascading waterfalls.

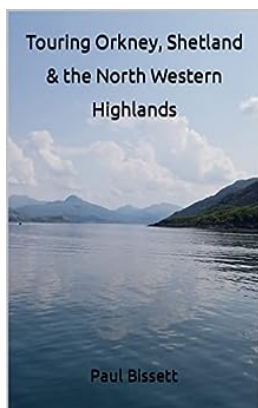

One of the highlights of this region is the iconic Eilean Donan Castle. Nestled on a small island where three lochs meet, this 13th-century castle is a sight to behold. Step inside and be transported to a bygone era as you explore the historic rooms and learn about its fascinating past.

For adventure seekers, the North Western Highlands offer endless opportunities for hiking, mountaineering, and wildlife spotting. The Cairngorms National Park, with its vast wilderness and diverse ecosystems, is a playground for outdoor enthusiasts.

A journey through Orkney, Shetland, and the North Western Highlands is nothing short of extraordinary. From ancient wonders to stunning landscapes, this region captivates the hearts of travelers seeking both history and natural beauty. I wrote this book to be used with a map of Scotland (yes, there are general maps of each area in the book) to help you know what is in the area you plan to visit. Each site has a brief description and a link to a website (if they have one) so you can find out more details if your interest is piqued. It is not a book full of beautiful pictures, nor in-depth history, more of a guide.

I grew up less than 5 miles from Hopetoun House and have visited it. I have walked, cycled, and driven through its grounds more times than I can remember, but I never realized that Midhope Castle (Lallybroch in outlander) was only 1.5 miles away.

That's what I have tried to address in this book, by listing every major attraction and many minor ones within geographical areas, you will know what is close by and won't miss something that you will regret later.

I have also listed many sites that are free to enter.
