The Birth of an Iconic Story

First published in 1886, Little Lord Fauntleroy quickly gained immense popularity and remains a beloved literary treasure. Frances Hodgson Burnett, a renowned British-American author, penned this remarkable novel during a tumultuous period in history. With the Industrial Revolution in full swing and societal changes abound, Burnett crafted a story that offered solace and hope amidst upheaval.

The story follows young Cedric Errol, a delightful and endearing seven-year-old boy raised in poverty by his widowed mother in New York City. Little did he know that his life was about to take an unexpected turn. When Cedric learns that he is the sole heir to his deceased English grandfather's extensive fortune, he is whisked away to England to assume his title as the Earl of Dorincourt. The ensuing narrative is filled with heartwarming adventures, familial complexities, and life-changing lessons.

Little Lord Fauntleroy is a novel by the English-American writer Frances Hodgson Burnett, her first children's novel. It was published as a serial in St. Nicholas Magazine from November 1885 to October 1886, then as a book by Scribner's (the publisher of St. Nicholas) in 1886. The novel set a precedent in copyright law when Burnett won a lawsuit in 1888 against E. V. Seebohm over the rights to theatrical adaptations of the work.

In a shabby New York side street in the mid-1880s, young Cedric Errol lives with his mother (known only as Mrs. Errol or "Dearest") in genteel poverty after the death of his father, Captain Cedric Errol. One day, they are visited by an English lawyer named Havisham with a message from Cedric's grandfather, the Earl of Dorincourt, an unruly millionaire who despises America and was very disappointed when his youngest son married an American lady. With the deaths of his father's elder brothers, Cedric has now inherited the title Lord Fauntleroy and is the heir to the earldom and a vast estate. Cedric's grandfather wants him to live in England and be educated as an English aristocrat. He offers his son's widow a house and guaranteed income, but he refuses to have anything to do with her, even after she declines his money.

However, the Earl is impressed by the appearance and intelligence of his American grandson and is charmed by his innocent nature. Cedric believes his grandfather to be an honorable man and benefactor, and the Earl cannot disappoint him. He therefore becomes a benefactor to his tenants, to their delight, though takes care to let them know that their benefactor is the child, Lord Fauntleroy.
