The play takes inspiration from Smith's extensive research, which involved conducting hundreds of interviews with individuals directly affected by issues such as the school-to-prison pipeline, racial profiling, and the failing education system. Through her meticulous attention to detail, Smith breathes life into each character she portrays on stage.

Anna Deavere Smith's ability to inhabit different personas allows her to authentically represent the diverse voices she encountered during her research. From students to teachers, parents to activists, each character demonstrates the raw emotions and lived experiences faced by those on the fringes of society.

The performance not only highlights the struggles but also offers glimpses of hope. Smith beautifully captures moments of resilience, compassion, and the unwavering spirit of those fighting for justice.

One of the most intriguing aspects of "Notes From The Field" is its non-traditional form. Smith seamlessly combines theater and documentary-style storytelling, blurring the line between reality and fiction. The intimacy and immediacy of her performance draw the audience into an immersive experience, forging a stronger connection to the powerful message she aims to deliver.

With each performance, Smith invites the audience to confront uncomfortable truths and question their own role in shaping the society we live in. She challenges us to examine systemic inequalities and encourages active participation in advocating for change.

In an era dominated by digital communication, "Notes From The Field" serves as a reminder of the power of human connection. The live performances allow for an exchange of energy between the performer and the audience, creating a collective experience that is both emotionally charged and intellectually stimulating.

Anna Deavere Smith's portrayal of these vital issues has garnered critical acclaim and numerous accolades. Her ability to shine a spotlight on the often-ignored voices in our society has sparked important conversations and pushed for tangible action.

Overall, "Notes From The Field" is a masterful creation that showcases Anna Deavere Smith's talent as a performer and her dedication to highlighting the urgent problems faced by our society. This singular experience leaves the audience with a renewed sense of purpose and the inspiration to be catalysts for change.

Now is the time to witness the extraordinary journey of "Notes From The Field" and immerse yourself in the profound transformation it offers.

"Smith's powerful style of living journalism uses the collective, cathartic nature of the theater to move us from despair toward hope." —The Village Voice

Anna Deavere Smith's extraordinary form of documentary theater shines a light on injustices by portraying the real-life people who have experienced them. "One of her most ambitious and powerful works on how matters of race continue to divide and enslave the nation" (Variety).

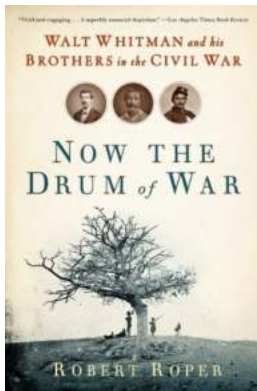

Smith renders a host of figures who have lived and fought the system that pushes students of color out of the classroom and into prisons. (As Smith has put it: "Rich kids get mischief, poor kids get pathologized and incarcerated.")

Using people's own words, culled from interviews and speeches, Smith depicts Rev. Jamal Harrison Bryant, who eulogized Freddie Gray; Niya Kenny, a high school student who confronted a violent police deputy; activist Bree Newsome, who took the Confederate flag down from the South Carolina State House grounds; and many others. Their voices bear powerful witness to a great iniquity of our time—and call us to action with their accounts of resistance and hope.
