There has been another police shooting of an unarmed Black man, and like many people in his community, Shotta has had enough. He's a brilliant genius and he knows what it feels like to lose a loved one at the hands of the same people who were supposed to serve and protect. He's had enough. Enough ruminating on causes and solutions. Enough marching and campaigning. Enough of the stress and anxiety of following the ups and downs of the latest news cycle. Today he flies.

Shotta's Moon is a science fiction infused tale of magical realism. It was inspired by the social unrest we experienced during the American summer of 2020.
