The Lightning

The lightning you may have noticed on the horizon lately is from regulation, as it bolts toward sectors and issues throughout the global economy. Energy. Privacy, data ownership & internet. AI & machine learning. Crypto & Blockchain. Antitrust & finance. If the government is going to drop $2 trillion or $4 trillion into the economy, there are going to be more rules and regulations.

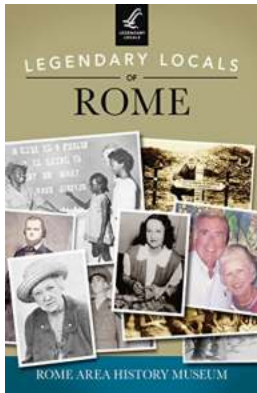

The Question

How can organizations, investors and individuals anticipate, survive and capitalize on the risk of this regulation? By developing a more powerful understanding of who's a global investor and where law and regulation originate. This book presents insights and cases that help build that understanding. It synthesizes today's key regulatory risks. It illuminates connections between those risks and tough questions that organizations, government, courts and society will confront tomorrow. It offers intelligence on ways, amid the boombox blare of risks and questions, to discern opportunity and seize it.
