Christine Marion Fraser was brought up in the Govan tenements in Glasgow; as a child there, in the 1950s, she contracted a rare muscular disease which led to her being confined in a wheelchair for the rest of her life.

Not deterred by her disability, she went on to lead a normal life. She married Ken and had a daughter, Evelyn. Her spirits were not affected. With her characteristic warmth and good humour, she conveys the joy of finding a little house, a home where she and her family could live in with the surrounding beauty of the landscape.

But it was a home that was full of problems, structurally. The leaky roof was a contention for them ... the lack of a tank for water was another. There were mice ... a constant presence. Tania, her beloved dog was her main companion during the day. Despite the problems that came with the cottage, Christine was determined to see her first book, Rhanna, published.

In Green Are My Mountains, bestselling author Christine Marion Fraser continues the uplifting and inspiring story which began in Blue Above the Chimneys and Roses Round the Door.

Christine Marion Fraser (1938-2002) was one of Scotland's best-selling authors. She was the author of the much-loved Rhanna series, a Scottish saga set on the Hebridean island of Rhanna. She also wrote the acclaimed King's Croft series as well as the Noble series. Christine's formative years were spent in the post-war Govan district of Glasgow and she spent her later life in Argyll with her husband.
