If you feel a deep spiritual connection with the mystical lands of Ireland, or you simply sense the enchantment of the words of Ireland's famed Nobel Prize-winning Poet, William Butler Yeats, you'll enjoy this fourth volume in the Moods of Ireland series, Mystical Moods of Ireland, Vol. IV: In the Footsteps of W. B. Yeats at Coole Park and Ballylee, capturing the moods of two of the literary icon's favorite places -- and sources of inspiration -- in County Galway, Ireland.

For more than 30 summers, Yeats sought refuge at Coole Park and in his 15th Century Norman castle, Thoor Ballylee, from the social, cultural and political upheaval of late 19th and early 20th Century Ireland.

The perfect accompaniment to any collection of Yeats' works, these stunning images by Author/Photographer James A. Truett, will take you along on your own visual journey "In the Seven Woods," immortalized in his 1903 collection of the same name, and to his iconic Tower with its Winding Stair, both featured in his later writings.

You'll certainly see why he once described the area around Coole Park and Ballylee to a friend with these words:

"Everything is so beautiful that to go elsewhere is to leave beauty behind."

Let this book and these images be your refuge as well, as you experience and feel the natural and other-worldly beauty that inspired one of the greatest literary minds of our time.

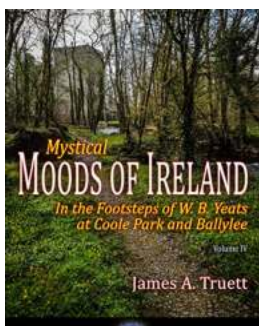

Here's what fans are saying about James A. Truett's work:

"W.B. Yeats showed his love for Ireland through his poetry, and James Truett shows his love for Ireland and Yeats through these pictures. A dream come true for any Yeats fan -- like me!" ~ Allison Elliott

"So many of your photographs are in W. B. Yeats' words... 'inwrought with gold.' And in that, beautiful." ~ Vivienne Nichols

"Reading Yeats and embracing Truett's images: a thrilling journey." ~ Dr. Michael J. Shadow, PhD.
