Their days were filled with exhilarating activities such as hiking, rock climbing, and white-water rafting. Sarah's adventurous spirit and love for adrenaline-pumping experiences brought a thrilling element to each venture, while John's expertise as a warden ensured their safety amidst the rugged terrain.

Encounters with Wildlife

The Rockies are teeming with fascinating wildlife, and Sarah and John had the privilege of observing some of these incredible creatures in their natural habitat. From the graceful elk roaming the open meadows to the elusive mountain goats perched on steep cliffs, they were constantly in awe of the diversity and resilience of the animals.

One particular encounter left a lasting impression on Sarah. While hiking along a remote trail, they stumbled upon a family of black bears playing by a creek. The heartwarming sight of the cubs innocently frolicking around their protective mother was an unforgettable experience, making them appreciate the importance of preserving these precious habitats.

Unforgettable Landscapes

As they ventured deeper into the Rockies, Sarah and John were treated to countless breathtaking landscapes. Towering waterfalls cascading down rugged cliffs, serene emerald lakes nestled between towering peaks, and expansive glaciers glistening under the golden sunlight – each sight was more awe-inspiring than the last.

The couple embarked on a helicopter tour that provided a bird's-eye view of the majestic Rocky Mountains. From above, the vast expanse of raw beauty was awe-inspiring, leaving them with an indescribable sense of wonder and reverence for nature's grandeur.

A Journey of Growth and Connection

Beyond the physical adventures and captivating sights, Sarah and John's expedition became a journey of personal growth and forging a deeper connection with one another. Surrounded by the untamed wilderness, they learned to trust their instincts, push their boundaries, and relied on each other's strengths to overcome challenges.

The long days spent hiking, horseback riding, and immersing themselves in the Rockies' splendor provided ample opportunities for introspection and reflection. Sarah felt a profound sense of gratitude for the ability to explore this awe-inspiring corner of the world, and the bond between her and John grew stronger with each passing adventure.

Saying Farewell to the Rockies

As their expedition came to an end, Sarah and John bid a bittersweet farewell to the Rockies, etching lasting memories and lessons deep within their hearts. The experience left an indelible mark on their souls, forever fueling their love for adventure and wildlife conservation.

Blue Creek Bride begins with a flashback to a melt-down I had near the end of a twenty six kilometre horseback journey with my husband, Phil. He was a back country park warden with Parks Canada in Jasper National Park. We were newly married and I was accompanying him for the first time into his district of Blue Creek.

After a brief explanation of the curious chain of events that led to us meeting, I begin a chronological description of the five trips I made with Phil over the summers of 2002 and 2003.

Being a Kiwi fresh from five years living in London, UK, and having not ridden for over twenty years, the Canadian wilderness experience was often a difficult one. Yet, as I was having an adventure with Phil that seemed like something out of a movie, it also held some of the very best times of my life.

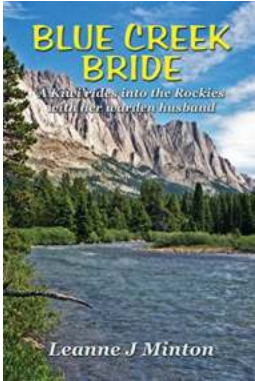

The book tells of learning horsemanship from Phil; coping with wearisome hours in the saddle and being alternately amused and thwarted by my saddle horse, Smoky; getting used to domestic life in a log cabin with no electricity or running water; working as a team with Phil on various warden tasks; travelling with other wardens; doing battle with mosquitoes; and overshadowing everything, being awed by the beauty of the Rockies.

To sum up, Blue Creek Bride encompasses the journey towards competence of a novice in the back country. It's told with honesty and humour and provides entertaining reading.
