Chasing Haunting Legends

One of the most famous haunted sites of Iceland is the abandoned town of Hesteyri. Once a thriving fishing village, it fell into disrepair and eventually became deserted. Locals believe that the town is now inhabited by vengeful spirits who roam the empty streets and dilapidated buildings under the cloak of darkness.

Another chilling legend surrounds the Dettifoss waterfall, known as the "Waterfall of the Dead." According to local lore, this powerful cascade is said to have been cursed by a sorceress. It is believed that the waterfall's forceful flow is fueled by the souls of those who perished in its vicinity.
