WHAT happens when we lose a beloved pet and begin to think about a new one? We hesitate. We wonder if the time is right. We stall. A compelling, sometimes funny, sometimes poignant, memoir, A HAPPY TRUTH is a mesmerizing story of old and new, of letting go and serendipitous discoveries, and meeting bright-eyed Hannah and deciding to love again.

Before that, though, the author finds a tiny white kitten clinging to her office window screen, and despite an unexpected snowstorm in late March, Orion, named for the famous constellation, makes it to an emergency vet hospital in a neighboring state. You'll also meet a peaceful "first dog" that inspires the Zen of Noah, all of which brings this endearing book to life. Pets need love and consistent care, and that inspires us; they also nurture and comfort us, even empower our lives in ways that allow us to grow and expand our sense of self. In fact, the dogs and cats we love actually keep us going through the maze of days we call life.

D.A. Hickman knows the only life worth living is one filled with love, even though loss is always part of the calculation. Dogs and cats, with lifespans that nowhere near mirror ours, almost accidentally, teach us about radical acceptance. Hickman's engaging memoir is filled with joy, revelation. While death and loss are byproducts, so are inspiring new beginnings. A loving book from a woman who knows the answer is to take chances, love more, and always, always...get another dog. —Ellen Stimson, author of Mud Season
