- Red, white, and blue nylon cords
- A small wooden or plastic macrame board
- A pair of scissors
- A tape measure
- A small clip or safety pin

Step 1: Cutting the Cords

Start by cutting three equal lengths of red, white, and blue cords, measuring approximately 30 inches each. Ensure the cords are long enough to fit comfortably around your wrist with some extra length for adjusting and tying the bracelet at the end.

Step 2: Setting Up the Board

Place your macrame board on a flat surface and affix the top end of the cords onto the board using the clip or safety pin. This will keep the cords steady as you work on the bracelet.

Step 3: Starting the Knots

To create the striped pattern, start by tying a row of square knots. Take the first four cords (two red and two white) and create a square knot. Repeat this process with the next four cords (two white and two blue), and continue alternating until you reach the desired bracelet length.

Step 4: Adding Beads (Optional)

If you want to add some extra flair to your bracelet, you can incorporate beads into the design. Take a bead and thread it onto one of the cords before tying the square knots. Continue this process, spacing the beads apart evenly as desired.

Step 5: Finishing the Bracelet

Once you've reached your desired bracelet length or have used all of the cords, tie a secure knot at the end. Trim any excess cord, leaving a small tail for adjustment. You can also add a dab of clear nail polish or fabric glue to the ends to prevent fraying.

Step 6: Adjusting and Tying the Bracelet

Wrap the bracelet around your wrist and adjust the length to ensure a comfortable fit. Once you're happy with the sizing, tie the ends of the bracelet together using a double knot. Trim any excess cord, leaving a small tail for a neater appearance.
