Me? A Minister? YES!

"The average Christian must stop thinking about a special group of people as 'the ministers,' and start thinking about their own ability to minister to another's needs."

Many people think that Christian service is something that takes place in the church building. They believe that Bible study, music, and Sunday School are the only opportunities for lay ministry. They keep their talents within the four walls of the church. There is so much more to be done.

In this practical book, Frank R. Tillapaugh challenges Christians to move beyond the "fortress mentality" of many local churches. Through outreach ministries, every local church can become an integral part of the surrounding community. Tillapaugh examines many successful outreach ministries and how each Christian can develop his or her ministry potential. Each chapter includes study questions to challenge the reader, and an appendix of active parachurch groups for the Christian who wants to get involved.

Chapters include:

- Taking Our Ministries to the Streets
- It Can Be Done in the Average Local Church
- You've Got Potential and Permission
- Your Special Call to Ministry
- Overcoming the Obstacles
- Staying on Course
- God Works When We Pray
- How and Why God Makes Miracles

Frank R. Tillapaugh is the pastor of the Bear Valley Baptist Church in Denver, Colorado. He is a graduate of Long Beach State College and the Conservative Baptist Theological Seminary. He is the author of the Regal book, Unleashing the Church.
