Why not 'look inside' to get a flavour of what to expect?

I love the taste of your name

I love the way your name feels in my mouth.

Rising and falling in sublime symmetry.

'Monika'.

I love the way your name is formed.

I purse my lips, then summon a soft sound from deep within.

'Mon-i-ka, Mon-i-ka'.

I could chew your name like gum,
and never get tired.

Unexpectedly hearing your name from the lips of others
soothes me like a waft of warm air on a dank day.

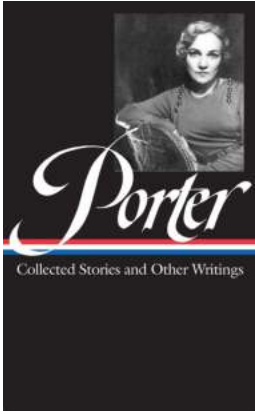

Embracing your name on my tongue turns a smile,
and hides the disappointment that the sound of your name is the only part of you I have left to hold.

I love the way your name makes me feel;
the memories it conjures.

I loved every time I said your name
and you were there to hear it.

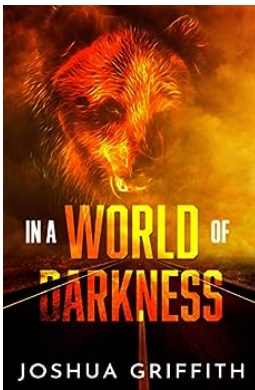

Sometimes, a name is the only real thing we have left.

I'll hold your name
in my mouth forever,
because this kind of love
is eternal.
