Recalled Landscapes is an ongoing series that showcases Kroyani's exceptional talent and deep understanding of nature's essence. The series takes inspiration from various landscapes the artist has encountered during his travels, subtly blending memories and emotions into each artwork. Kroyani believes that a landscape is more than just a physical place; it is a collection of stories, memories, and experiences.

Each piece in the Recalled Landscapes series encapsulates the essence of a particular location. Exploring the Time-Space Continuum

Recalled Landscapes not only takes viewers on a visual journey but also explores the concept of time and its impact on our perception of landscapes. Kroyani's work challenges the notion that landscapes are constant and unchanging. Instead, he suggests that our memories and experiences shape how we perceive the world around us.

The artist's use of light and shadow is key in conveying this temporal aspect of his art. By playing with different lighting conditions, Kroyani creates the illusion of different times of day or even seasons within a single painting. This gives viewers a sense of movement and evolution, as if the landscape itself is alive.

The Recalled Landscapes series is a testament to Kroyani's ability to capture fleeting moments and encapsulate them onto canvas. It serves as a reminder that even though time passes and landscapes may change, their beauty and significance remain ingrained in our memories.
