Through introspection and self-discovery, the characters in "Talking To Ourselves" embark on a search for meaning and purpose. Neuman's insightful prose allows readers to connect with their struggles and reflect on their own lives.

The Characters: Mario, Elena, and Lito

Mario, a middle-aged writer diagnosed with cancer, is torn between his passion for writing and his role as a husband and father. Elena, his wife, tries to balance her commitment to her family with her desire for personal fulfillment. Lito, their ten-year-old son, grapples with the complexities of adolescence while witnessing his parents' struggles.

Neuman masterfully portrays the depths of their emotions, allowing readers to empathize with their joys and sorrows. The raw and honest portrayal of these characters makes "Talking To Ourselves" a truly immersive and emotionally-charged reading experience.

The Inner World: Reflection and Self-Discovery

"Talking To Ourselves" invites readers to reflect on their own inner worlds. Neuman's rich descriptions and introspective narrative style encourage contemplation and self-discovery. As we delve into the characters' thoughts, we are prompted to question our own desires, fears, and aspirations.

The novel challenges us to examine the boundaries between self and others, as well as the intricacies of human connections. It explores the universal human experience of longing for connection, validation, and understanding.

The Language of the Novel: Beauty in Every Word

Neuman's prose is a work of art in itself. His lyrical and poetic language paints vivid imagery, immersing readers in the characters' world. From the bustling streets of Buenos Aires to the quiet introspective moments, every word is carefully chosen to create an emotional resonance.

The use of descriptive language not only enhances readers' sensory experience but also captures the subtleties of human emotions. Neuman's mastery of language makes "Talking To Ourselves" a joy to read for anyone who appreciates the beauty of words.

The Impact of "Talking To Ourselves"

Reading "Talking To Ourselves" is a transformative experience. It encourages us to examine our own lives, relationships, and the choices we make. Neuman's masterful storytelling takes us on a journey of self-reflection and self-discovery.

The novel reminds us of the importance of conversation, both with others and with ourselves. It prompts us to tune in to our inner voice, understand our desires and fears, and find the courage to pursue what truly matters to us.

"Talking To Ourselves" challenges us to embrace our vulnerabilities and connect with the world around us on a deeper level. It reminds us that, ultimately, we are all seeking the same things: love, understanding, and a sense of purpose.

"Talking To Ourselves" by Andrés Neuman is a beautifully crafted novel that delves into the complexities of human emotions, relationships, and self-discovery. Through its captivating narrative and insightful prose, the book invites readers on a thought-provoking journey of reflection.

As we experience the lives of Mario, Elena, and Lito, we are reminded of the importance of listening to our inner voices and connecting with those around us. Neuman's ability to capture the essence of the human experience with such precision and beauty is truly remarkable.

If you are ready to embark on a literary adventure that will challenge your perception of self and others, "Talking To Ourselves" is a must-read. Get lost in its pages and discover the power of conversation, both with others and with yourself.

A searing family drama from one of Latin America's most original voices
One trip. Two love stories. Three voices.

Lito is ten years old and is almost sure he can change the weather when he concentrates very hard. His father, Mario, anxious to create a memory that will last for his son's lifetime, takes him on a road trip in a truck called Pedro. But Lito doesn't know that this might be their last trip: Mario is gravely ill. Together, father and son embark on a journey takes them through strange geographies that seem to meld the different parts of the Spanish-speaking world. In the meantime, Lito's mother, Elena, restlessly seeks support in books, and soon undertakes an adventure of her own that will challenge her moral limits. Each narrative—of father, son, and mother—embodies one of the different ways that we talk to ourselves: through speech, through thought, and through writing. While neither of them dares to tell the complete truth to the other two, their individual voices nonetheless form a poignant conversation.

Sooner or later, we all face loss. Andrés Neuman movingly narrates the ways the lives of those who survive loss are transformed; how that experience changes our ideas about time, memory, and our own bodies; and how the acts of reading, and of sex, can serve as powerful modes of resistance. Talking to Ourselves presents a tender yet unsentimental portrait of the workings of love and family; a reflection both on grief and on the consolation of words. Neuman, the author of the award-winning Traveler of the Century, displays his characteristic warmth, bittersweet humor, and wide-ranging intellect, giving us the rich, textured, and strikingly different voices and experiences of three singular characters while presenting, above all, a profound tribute to those who have ever had to care for a loved one.
