Highlights from The Best American Short Stories 2016

One of the standout stories in this compilation is Anthony Doerr's hauntingly beautiful "The River Nemunas." Set during World War II in Lithuania, the narrative follows the journey of a young girl as she navigates the complexities of war and love. Doerr's masterful storytelling transports readers to another time and place, evoking a range of emotions that linger long after the story ends.

Another unforgettable tale is "Pale Imitations" by Zadie Smith, which explores themes of identity and self-discovery. Smith's captivating prose delves into the lives of two college friends, examining the choices they make and the effect those decisions have on their futures. This engrossing narrative invites readers to reflect on their own paths and the inherent struggles of defining oneself.

Matthew Neill Null's "In the Year of the Dog" is a gripping exploration of family dynamics and the complexities of relationships. Set in Appalachia, this story presents a raw and powerful portrayal of a man trapped between loyalty to his family and the desire for personal freedom. Null's vivid descriptions paint a vivid picture of both the physical and emotional landscape, leaving readers captivated by the characters' struggles.
