An engaging historical time travel adventure set in WW2 - perfect for fans of Emma Carroll or Michael Morpurgo.

Emmie let out a huge sob – “It’s not a film set”, she cried. She held onto Jack for a moment, then took a step back, closed her eyes and shouted - “WHERE AM I?”

When Jack and Emmie suddenly find themselves transported back to London in 1940, they find a world both familiar, yet very different. As they dodge falling bombs and over-zealous policemen, they befriend Jan - a lonely Polish refugee. Together, they must work out if the shadowy figure they keep seeing is a spy and unlock the secret of getting home again...

This educational story helps to weave current views and historical events together in an exciting adventure which will appeal to both boys and girls between 8 and 12.

'An excellent book to read when studying WW2.' Matt Wilson, Awordaboutbooks

'This book represents why I like historical fiction so much.' Julie DenOuden, Girl On The Move Reads

'A perfect way to educate subtly through the eyes of two children.' Susan Johnston, Goodreads

'Would have a younger reader on the edge of their seat.' Sherry Fowler Chancellor, Ramblings of a Writer
