Among these gems, the novel "Bury What We Cannot Take" stands out with its profound narrative that explores the complexities of family, survival, and the courage to confront one's past.

Understanding the Premise

"Bury What We Cannot Take" is a compelling work of fiction penned by author Kirstin Chen. Set against the backdrop of 1950s Maoist China, the story follows the lives of the Pan family who are caught in the midst of political turmoil. When the government announces a campaign to purge counter-revolutionaries from the country, the family's life takes an unexpected turn.

Based on true events, the novel delves into an era where loyalty, betrayal, and sacrifices become integral to survival. Li Ling, the protagonist, is faced with an impossible decision when her family's loyalty is questioned. Forced to choose between betraying her family or sacrificing her own dreams, Li Ling embarks on a journey that tests the limits of her endurance and the power of her love.

“Complex and rich, Chen’s story serves as a fascinating window into a unique period of history and the plight of one displaced family.” —Harper’s Bazaar

The day nine-year-old San San and her twelve-year-old brother, Ah Liam, discover their grandmother taking a hammer to a framed portrait of Chairman Mao is the day that forever changes their lives. To prove his loyalty to the Party, Ah Liam reports his grandmother to the authorities. But his belief in doing the right thing sets in motion a terrible chain of events.

Now they must flee their home on Drum Wave Islet, which sits just a few hundred meters across the channel from mainland China. But when their mother goes to procure visas for safe passage to Hong Kong, the government will only issue them on the condition that she leave behind one of her children as proof of the family’s intention to return.

Against the backdrop of early Maoist China, this captivating and emotional tale follows a brother, a sister, a father, and a mother as they grapple with their agonizing decision, its far-reaching consequences, and their hope for redemption.
