This tragic event, which unfolded more than a century ago, serves as a testament to the indomitable human spirit and the resilience of a close-knit community.

It was a cold winter morning on February 3, 1891, when the town of Cedarville woke up to a disheartening sight. The train, known as the Cedarville Express, had derailed in the early hours, turning the picturesque railway into a scene of chaos and destruction. The once bustling railroad now lay twisted and broken, with carriages strewn across the tracks.

No. 97's wreckage as it appeared several days after the derailment. Most of the wood from the wrecked cars has been removed by area residents and locomotive No. 1102 has been set upright prior to removal from the ravine. This view was made popular on a widely circulated postcard in the 1920s and 1930s.

A record storm triggers a deadly train wreck. As 18 perish in the burning debris, survivors fight for life in this true story of the 1889 disaster.

A storm like no one had ever seen caused tiny Wolf Creek in Thaxton, Virginia, to rage in the darkness of night. An earthen fill that carried the railroad over the creek could not withstand the power of the rising water, and Norfolk & Western passenger train Number Two plummeted into a hole in the earth.

There in the valley beneath the shadow of the towering Peaks of Otter, passengers and crew scrambled from the wreckage and water in a life-or-death struggle. The best and worst of humanity were on display in the small hours of the night, as some worked heroically to rescue those trapped in the debris while others stood by concerned only for themselves. A terrible fire ensued, and those who remained trapped were consumed by the flames. The bloodied and battered survivors suffered through four more hours of isolation and torture in the rain alongside the burning wreckage before help would finally arrive.

Written and extensively researched by the great-great grandson of the railroad section master at Thaxton, Lost at Thaxton tells the forgotten true story of one of the worst railroad accidents in the history of Virginia and the people who lived and died that night.

"I have stood on the battlefield, and heard shot and shell rattling around me, and seen my comrades falling like leaves in autumn, but I have never seen anything that curdled my blood with horror or moved me to deeper depths of compassion than the scenes of that dreadful night" — Major Henry N. Martin, Wreck Survivor
