Take a zany cartoonish trip back to the stone age when Dr. Ann Brainsmart, a brilliant rocket scientist, accidentally travels back in time thanks to a rocket ship experiment that goes in a completely unexpected direction. She is accompanied by her talking robotic dog, Oscar, that is half robot and half canine with gadgets galore, who tries to be helpful, but often just adds to the confusion. When Dr. Ann lands her ship in pre-historic times, where encountering dinosaurs like a grumpy Tyrannosaurus Rex is a normal, everyday thing, she meets a cranky caveman named Ug Lug. At first, Ug doesn't take to Dr. Ann very well, but, in time, the two fall in love and then marry and have a son named Dug Lug before Ann is able to build a time machine to bring them all to present-day America.

Once in the modern world, Ug and Dug have a lot of work to do adapting to our society and its high-tech gadgets like television sets and indoor plumbing. Can a caveman and his son learn to adjust to life in a modern home with electricity, running water, and television sets, or will they just destroy everything in their paths? There goes the bathroom! And just how do you explain to pre-historic humans that people are not living inside the TV set? Will Oscar the dog drive Ug crazy? What will Ann's father, the brilliant Dr. Brainsmart, think about his daughter marrying a literal caveman? Will Ug be in trouble?

Plus, you will also meet Claw, a talking cat with kung fu ninja abilities, who, along with his boss, the evil mad scientist Dr. Madbad, is determined to steal the secrets of time travel from the Lug family. Will Dr. Madbad steal the Lug's time machine, or will he fail miserably? Will Claw be of any use to the mad doctor, or will he face the wrath of Dr. Madbad?

As a bonus, character profiles are included, toward the end of the book, along with funny Ug riddles that will make you and your kids laugh out loud. This hilarious comic book (aka graphic novel) is just what today's kids want in a book. It contains wonderfully silly, cartoon-styled characters and art that will have you and your kids laughing before you even start reading.

If you love cartoons, parodies, and tons of laughs you and your kids will love reading this graphic novel together!
