“The time is now at hand for the Hallows of Arthur to be gathered. For unity not division; for love not war; for creation not destruction; for grace not law.”

Tia Trevelyan’s quest to uncover the secrets of her mysterious past and her connection to a magical hoard of treasure is back on. Beginning at the Tower of London and ending among the ruins of Glastonbury Abbey, Tia unearths more than she bargained for.

With the help of faithful friend Pasco and larger-than-life sister Meghan, Tia learns more about the circumstances that led to her being left on the doorstep of a children’s home as a baby, and discovers she may be connected to a fascinating medieval treasure that has all but been forgotten.

Will the trio outwit their sinister foes to find the answers they seek?

"Stormhaven is so appealing I'm considering searching for available properties on RightMove. Mysterious pendants, Arthurian legend & a School-in-a-Castle: utterly enchanting!" Kirsty Applebaum, author of The Life And Time Of Lonny Quicke

"Superb! Full of mystery and history and erudition with the most incredible activities at the back - my daughter and I lay on the floor and listened to Adagio for Strings. This book shines with love. I felt I was in the hands of a wonderful human being." Zillah Bethell, author of The Shark Caller

"I really enjoyed it and I can see that child readers of all kinds will love it too - from fantasy fans, to myth-lovers, to mystery-addicts, to those who love school stories. Great stuff!" Sophie Kirtley, author of The Wild Way Home and The Way To Impossible Island

"A joy of a mystery novel - its thrills are threaded with the myths and annals of ancient Britain, and its young protagonist, Tia, is admirable not only for her budding bravery, but also for being such a compassionate heroine." Darren Simpson, author of Scavengers
