"I hate interviews because I do not get paid for them" -- George Sanders

George Sanders was Hollywood's "Professional Cad".

A fine actor, he played mostly secondary, and often villainous, roles in such classic films as THE BLACK SWAN, THE PICTURE OF DORIAN GRAY, Alfred Hitchcock's FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT, THE GHOST AND MRS. MUIR, and ALL ABOUT EVE, for which he won an Academy Award. He, also, starred as "The Falcon" and "The Saint" in several movies.

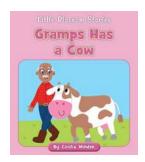

Sanders played his charming heel both on an off the screen, refusing to give autographs, avoiding press interviews whenever possible, and doing everything he could to steer clear of the tax collector. He was married four times; once to Zsa Zsa Gabor, and once to her sister.

GEORGE SANDERS, Michael B. Druxman's one-person stage play, joins the actor at the end of his life, as he ponders the mistakes he has made and contemplates suicide.
