

The Most Breathtaking Summer Landscape in Ireland - Witness the Greenest Wind Ever!

When it comes to picturesque landscapes, Ireland truly stands out. From its stunning cliffs to lush green meadows, every corner of this magnificent country is like a page ripped from a fairytale. Visitors from all over the world flock to Ireland to immerse themselves in its natural beauty. However, this summer has brought a breathtaking phenomenon that has left both locals and tourists in awe - the greenest wind ever witnessed in Ireland!

What is a green wind, you might ask? Well, it refers to a magical occurrence where the wind carries pollen, giving the air a vibrant green hue. This phenomenon typically occurs during the summer months when vegetation is in full bloom. However, this year's summer has taken it to a whole new level, creating landscapes that seem straight out of a dream.

The Perfect Blend of Nature's Colors

Imagine walking through a valley adorned with emerald green grass, surrounded by rolling hills. As the gentle breeze blows, you can see waves of vibrant green pollen flying through the air, painting the landscape in an ethereal hue. It's a sight that leaves you breathless, making you feel as if you've stepped into a magical wonderland.

But what causes this unique phenomenon? Ireland's climate, with its mild temperatures and high levels of precipitation, creates the perfect conditions for lush vegetation to thrive. The moisture in the air helps the pollen spread, and when combined with the wind, it creates a mesmerizing spectacle.

A Photographer's Dream Come True

For photographers and nature enthusiasts, this summer has been an absolute dream come true. Capturing the greenest wind in Ireland requires both skill and patience. As the sun sets, casting a warm, golden light over the landscape, photographers set up their cameras, waiting for that perfect moment when the wind carries the pollen gracefully through the frame.

The photographs taken during this phenomenon are nothing short of breathtaking. They not only showcase the beauty of Ireland's landscapes but also capture the sheer magic and tranquility of the greenest wind summer. From stunning meadows to majestic waterfalls, each photograph tells a story of its own, inviting viewers to explore the wonders of Ireland.

"Lucy changes from feeling alone in a strange place to never wanting to leave."

Lucy can hardly wait for summer vacation – she and her mother are flying all the way from Germany to sunny California! But at the last minute, the plan falls through and she winds up having to fly all alone to Ireland instead.

To an eccentric aunt she doesn't even know, and who, apparently, lives in an old cottage without a roof. And that in a country where it rains all the time!

Lucy doesn't want to go, not one little bit, but there's no other option. By the end of the five weeks, though, she has to admit it was the best vacation ever.

The Greenest Wind tells a touching, gently humorous story that explores themes of friendship, family, creativity – and the importance of aunts. A perennial seller in its native Germany, and already translated into Swedish and Dutch, the novel now makes its appearance in English.

"It's a gentle, character-driven story (...) By the end, you'll ultimately feel like Lucy: that her time in Ireland was far too short and can't wait to hear what happens on her next trip." –From Lisa Davis' review in the blog of Global Literature in Libraries Initiative, a cooperation between translators and librarians aiming to bring more international literature to American library patrons.

"Aunt Paula and her niece connect because of their creativity, humor and, most of all, their ability to take things as they are." –Boek en Jeugd Online (The Netherlands)

"At the end of the vacation everything is different. Lucy Lindemann has become a bit more mature. (...) For readers aged 10 to 100." –SFB Radio Berlin (Germany)

"Lucy changes from feeling alone in a strange place to never wanting to leave." – German Book Office New York

"I have always maintained the importance of Aunts" –Jane Austen in a letter to her niece Caroline in 1815.
