The story revolves around the enigmatic character of Ireland, a young woman who, in the wake of a personal tragedy, embarks on a soul-searching adventure. It is during her travels that she encounters a diverse cast of characters, each with their own secrets and desires.

The Allure of Ireland and its People

Ireland, with its lush green fields and rugged cliffs, serves as the perfect backdrop for this tale of self-discovery. Restrepo paints a vivid picture of the country's picturesque landscapes, immersing readers in its enchanting beauty.

The characters Ireland encounters along her journey are equally captivating. From the charismatic local pub owner with a troubled past to the mysterious artist struggling to find inspiration, each character adds depth and intrigue to the story.

Restrepo's attention to detail in describing Ireland's encounters brings them to life, making us feel as though we are right there beside her, experiencing every emotion and revelation.

The Power of Love and Connection

In "The Passenger Ireland," Restrepo delves into the complexities of human relationships and explores the profound impact they can have on our lives.

Through Ireland's encounters, we witness the transformative power of love and the connections we forge with others. From the blossoming friendship between Ireland and a fellow traveler to the deep romantic connections she discovers, Restrepo beautifully navigates the intricacies of human emotion.

The exploration of love is not limited to romantic relationships; Restrepo also delves into the bonds of family and friendship. These relationships are portrayed with such authenticity that they resonate deeply with readers, evoking a range of emotions from joy to heartbreak.

The Thrill of Self-Discovery

At its core, "The Passenger Ireland" is a tale of self-discovery and personal growth. As Ireland navigates through the trials and tribulations of her journey, she begins to unravel the layers of her own identity.

Restrepo explores the themes of identity and self-reflection with incredible depth, prompting readers to question their own sense of self. Through Ireland's experiences, we are reminded of the power of introspection and the importance of understanding ourselves.

The novel serves as a reminder that sometimes the most transformative journeys are the ones we embark on within ourselves.

Fully-illustrated, The Passenger collects the best new writing, photography, art and reportage from around the world.

IN THIS VOLUME: The mass is ended by Catherine Dunne and Caelainn Hogan • The Way Back by Colum McCann • A Trip to Westeros by Mark O'Connell • plus: life on the margins of two unions and right in the middle of Brexit, making war on each other for 30 years while playing on the same national rugby team, emigrating to the great enemy or transforming the country one referendum at a time, digging peat bogs and building cottages, talking of the sea in Gaelic, and much more.....

The Passenger sets off to discover a land full of charm and conflict, a country that in just a few decades has gone from being a poor, semi-theocratic society to a thriving economy free from the influence of the Catholic Church.

With the 1998 peace agreements, the conflict between nationalists and unionists seemed, if not resolved, at least dormant. But Brexit—with the ambiguous position it leaves Northern Ireland in—caused old tensions to resurface. The Passenger explores their ramifications in politics, society, culture, and sport.

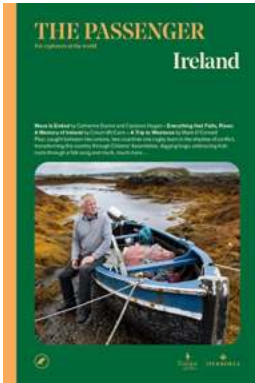

Meanwhile, south of the border, epochal transformation has seen a deeply patriarchal, conservative society give space to diversity, the only country in the world to enshrine gay marriage in law through a referendum. And there's a whole other Ireland abroad, an Irish diaspora that looks to the old country with new-found pride but doesn't forget the ugliness it fled from.

Memory and identity intertwine with the transformations—from globalisation to climate change—that are remodelling the Irish landscape, from the coastal communities under threat of disappearing together with the Irish language fishermen use to talk about the sea, while inland the peat bogs, until recently important sources of energy and jobs, are being abandoned. From Catherine Dunne to Colum McCann, Mark O'Connell and Sara Baume, Irish (but not only) writers and journalists tell of a country striving to stay a step ahead of time.
