Jacob Abbott and his brother John Stevens Cabot Abbott authored the famous Makers of History collection of biographies in the 1800s. These volumes were possibly best know for being read and appreciated by president Abraham Lincoln, who once said of the books, "To them I am indebted for about all the historical knowledge I have."

Alexander the Great is the biography of Alexander III (July 20/21, 356 BC – June 10/11, 323 BC). By the time he was 30, he had collected one of the largest empires in history, stretching from Greece to northwestern India. Abbott provides a thoroughly researched detail of Alexander's life, battles and conquests—as well as intriguing insights into his character.
