The Early Years of The Guy With Time

The Guy With Time, whose real name was Samuel Davidson, was an unassuming individual living in the small town of New Haven before the revolution broke out. He was known for his exceptional timekeeping skills and his ability to fix mechanical devices. Samuel had a deep desire for justice and despised the British rule. Little did he know that his skills and passion would play a crucial role in supporting the revolutionaries in their fight for freedom.

The Encounter with General Washington

One fateful day, Samuel's life changed forever. He was called upon to fix a broken pocket watch belonging to a man who claimed to be an influential figure secretly working towards the revolution. Unbeknownst to Samuel, the man he met that day was no other than General George Washington himself. Impressed by

Samuel's skills and loyalty, Washington decided to recruit him as a secret operative under the codename "The Guy With Time."
