After completing high school, Manning enrolled in the prestigious EOD training program at Camp Lejeune. The training was grueling, both physically and mentally. From identifying unexploded ordnance to handling improvised explosive devices, Manning learned the essential skills necessary to combat the threat of explosive hazards.

The Challenges of the Job

Being an EOD soldier is not for the faint-hearted. Every day, Matthew Manning and his fellow soldiers face life-threatening situations in their line of duty. They are responsible for rendering safe a wide range of explosives, including chemical, biological, radiological, and even nuclear devices.

One particularly harrowing experience for Manning was during a mission in Afghanistan. His team was tasked with disposing of several IEDs that were planted along a critical road used by military convoys. Despite the constant threat of enemy fire, Manning and his team successfully neutralized all the explosives, potentially saving countless lives.

Life on Two Sides EOD

Alongside his incredible dedication to the EOD mission, Matthew Manning is actively involved in raising awareness about the challenges faced by EOD soldiers. He believes that it is essential for people to understand the sacrifices and risks involved in this line of work.

Through his foundation, Two Sides EOD, Manning organizes various events and initiatives to support EOD soldiers. From fundraising campaigns for essential equipment to educational programs on explosive safety, Manning's commitment extends beyond the battlefield.

Mentoring the Next Generation

Matthew Manning firmly believes in the importance of passing down his expertise and guiding the next generation of EOD soldiers. He offers mentorship programs and shares his experiences with aspiring soldiers to ensure they are well-prepared for the challenges they will face.

"I want to inspire others to take up the EOD mantle," Manning expressed. "It's a difficult and often dangerous job, but it's an incredibly rewarding one. The feeling of making a difference, of saving lives, is indescribable."

Matthew Manning represents the epitome of courage, dedication, and selflessness. As an EOD soldier, he faces immense challenges on a daily basis, risking his life to protect countless others.

Through his foundation, Two Sides EOD, Manning continues to bring attention to the important work carried out by EOD soldiers and supports their needs both during and after their service. His mentorship programs ensure that future generations are prepared for the strenuous tasks they will undertake.

Matthew Manning's story is a powerful reminder of the heroes who work silently in the shadows, safeguarding our world from unseen dangers. Their bravery and sacrifice exemplify the core values of honor, duty, and selflessness that the EOD community holds dear.

Private Eli Recato's fellow soldiers call him “Bloodhound,” but Eli isn’t fond of the nickname. He isn’t fond of his self-appointed best buddy, Private Badger, either. What he IS fond of is saving lives by sniffing out IEDs (Improvised Explosive Devices) in Afghanistan and disabling them. But when a bomb finds HIM, Eli is faced with a choice that seems to be little more than the flip of a coin: head into a crawlspace and hide with an Afghan man he’s never met before, or hightail it out of insurgent territory without a weapon.
