One of the strengths of the Heather Park series is Black's ability to create well-rounded characters that readers become emotionally invested in. From feisty heroines striving for independence in a society that discourages it, to noble heroes torn between duty and desire, each character is brilliantly fleshed out and relatable.

One standout example is the charismatic Lady Amelia, the protagonist of "Love's Lost Letter." Born into privilege but suffocated by societal expectations, she embarks on a journey of self-discovery and finds love where she least expects it. As Amelia grapples with her own desires and societal norms, readers will be rooting for her every step of the way.

Heather Park is a new regency romance book, based on the screenplay. Embroidery patterns are available to download from the book's website.

Story:

The excitement of the summer begins when Mr. Sabastien Hunter holds a ball at Heather Park — the beautiful mansion set in the English countryside estate he recently inherited.

Evelyn Ashby and her two sisters, Annabel and Primrose, are invited to attend the ball, and are looking forward to meeting their new neighbour.

But Mr. Hunter is not the only rich and handsome young man to inherit prestigious mansions in the neighbourhood. Captain Domenic DeGrey has come home from the navy to take charge of Seaforth set on the coast nearby. And Mr. Crispin Midwinter has inherited Blackhall and plans to lighten its sombre mood with a ball of his own.

With three wealthy and eligible young gentlemen in their neighbourhood, Evelyn's mother is hopeful that at least one of her lovely young daughters will become engaged before the end of the summer.
