Act One: "Innocence Lost"

The first act titled "Innocence Lost" takes us on a nostalgic journey through the early lives of these iconic celebrities. The audience is transported back to the humble beginnings of these Hollywood legends, witnessing their early dreams, aspirations, and the challenges they had to overcome. From James Dean's rebellious youth to Audrey Hepburn's war-torn childhood, each story unfolds with raw emotion, evoking a sense of empathy and connection.

Throughout Act One, the actor delves deeply into portraying the young personas of these legendary figures, adopting their mannerisms, accents, and expressions, bringing authenticity to each character. As the audience is immersed in the unfolding narratives, they witness the sparks of talent and determination that set these legends on a path to greatness.

Act Two: "Triumph in the Spotlight"

Following a brief intermission, Act Two, "Triumph in the Spotlight," takes center stage. This act is dedicated to showcasing the iconic career highs and the personal battles fought by these Hollywood legends as they conquered the silver screen. The actor flawlessly transitions between characters, capturing the essence of their transformations as they became cultural icons.

The tragic life of Charlie Chaplin, the everlasting charm of Marilyn Monroe, or the unprecedented success of Orson Welles – each story unfolds with gripping intensity, allowing the audience to witness the euphoria and the challenges that accompanied their rise to stardom.

By seamlessly weaving together the behind-the-scenes anecdotes, intimate details, and the larger-than-life presence of these icons, The Hollywood Legends 36 offers an unprecedented glimpse into their lives, breaking down the barriers between performer and audience.

The Power of a One-Person Show

What makes The Hollywood Legends 36 truly remarkable is the extraordinary talent of the actor who brings these 36 Hollywood icons back to life. The immense responsibility of portraying such legendary figures falls upon a singular performer, whose dedication, versatility, and meticulous attention to detail breathe life into each character.

Through masterful storytelling and the manipulation of various stage elements, including lighting, sound effects, and set designs, the actor creates a mesmerizing experience that transcends time and space. As the Hollywood legends materialize before the audience's eyes, the performer undergoes a remarkable metamorphosis, blurring the line between reality and fantasy.

One-person shows have the unique ability to establish an intimate connection between the performer and the viewers. As the actor portrays these legendary figures, they expose the raw vulnerabilities, hidden passions, and complex emotions that made these icons human. By peeling back the glamorous façade, the audience gains a deeper understanding of the triumphs and tribulations that shaped their lives.

Unveiling the Untold Stories

The beauty of a one-person play lies in its ability to unearth the untold stories, revealing the lesser-known aspects of these Hollywood legends. Behind every glamorous red carpet appearance, there are intimate struggles, personal sacrifices, and private moments that have been shrouded in mystery for decades.

The Hollywood Legends 36 offers a platform for these untold stories to come to light, immersing the audience in the emotional rollercoaster that fueled the lives of these legendary actors and actresses. By painting a comprehensive picture of their lives, the play brings forth a renewed appreciation for their contributions to the silver screen and their enduring impact on popular culture.

“You know, I can get away with murder. The audience loves me.” – Peter Lorre

Peter Lorre was the “master of menace.” From his first film, Fritz Lang’s M, in which he was cast as a child murderer, to his films in England with Alfred Hitchcock, to his stint at Warner Brothers where he played unsavory characters in such movies as THE MALTESE FALCON, ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT, CASABLANCA and ARSENIC AND OLD LACE, to the amusing horror pictures he made with Vincent Price for producer Roger Corman (e.g. THE RAVEN), the Hungarian-born actor made an indelible impression on motion picture audiences for well over thirty years. Lorre’s personal life was also filled with conflict. A half-Jewish fugitive from Hitler’s Europe, the actor was married three times, was the victim of an unscrupulous business manager and also dealt with an off-and-on addiction to morphine. PETER LORRE, Michael B. Druxman’s one-person stage play, finds the actor in poor health near the end of his life. He contemplates his third divorce and ponders how he will provide for his young daughter, while remembering the greener years that he spent with the likes of Humphrey Bogart, John Huston and Sydney Greenstreet. One simple set.
