After a bullet pierces their front door, announcing the Nazi invasion of France, can a Catholic family with six children survive a fierce marauding army? It may have taken them six punishing years of hardship, hunger, and near-death, but the Gaillet family ultimately emerged triumphant on the safe shores of America. Hélène Gaillet de Neergaard recounts her journey from life as a young child of a prosperous businessman to a terrified fugitive in France, frequently separated from her parents while confronting war's daily ravages. Very little is known about French Catholic survivors living under German control. I WAS A WAR CHILD shares the death-defying days of a family on the run, who came together amid the famously savage acts of the Nazi army. Compared to THE DIARY OF A YOUNG GIRL by Anne Frank, this book will fascinate a wide readership from young adults to seniors alike. With fascinating details and black and white family photographs saved by Mr. Gaillet daring to brave the occupied north of France in 1942, this stirring look at the historic war will captivate anyone seeking a story of victory, as told by one intrepid little girl.

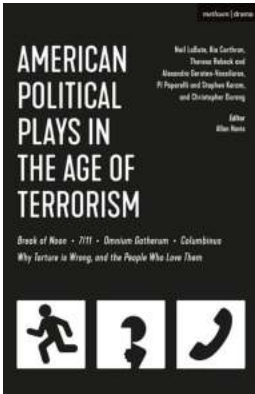

The story runs from June 1940 when forced to evacuate their house by a bullet through the front door until their safe flight to America in June of 1946.
